Global Seaborne Steelmaking Coal Supply-Demand Balance⁹

Thermal Coal: Global Energy Supply Over the Last 12 Years

- Fossil fuel consumption has provided the bulk of energy growth over the last 12-years as renewables attempt to scale up.
- Wind and solar alone cannot meet the world's increasing energy demands.
- Global energy demand grows on average 1-2% per year.

Thermal Coal: Resurgence in European Coal Demand

- The European Union imported 55 mln tonnes of thermal coal from Russia in 2021, representing 70% of all EU thermal coal imports¹²
- In April 2022, the European Union announced sanctions on Russian thermal coal imports to take effect on August 10, 2022
- Low natural gas imports from Russia, coupled with extremely high natural gas prices, have resulted in gas-to-coal switching at several European generating stations
- Limited additional seaborne thermal coal capacity from swing producers (U.S., Indonesia, Colombia, and South Africa) has pushed thermal coal prices to record highs
- Several European Union member countries are now relying on thermal coal imports to offset Russian gas and coal supply

Thermal Coal: Europe Adapting to an Energy Crisis

- June 28, 2022: G7 Nations allow financing of fossil fuel projects, a policy U-turn on its November 2021 COP26 pledge
- June 20, 2022: Netherlands activated the "early warning" phase of an energy crisis plan and lifted a cap on production of coal-fired power plants
- June 19, 2022: Germany's Economy Minister says Germany, Europe's largest coal consumer, will limit the use of natural gas for electricity production and instead burn more thermal coal
- June 19, 2022: Austria reactivates its 840-megawatt Mellach coal power plant (closed in 2020)

“ In the wake of the invasion of Ukraine, we are witnessing the creation of a new energy order.”

Mateusz Morawiecki

Prime Minister of Poland
July 4, 2022

“ We know that the energy mix and the plans of member states will adjust slightly because we are in an unexpected situation where we've decided to end our dependency on Russian fossil fuels.”

Tim McPhie

European Commission's energy spokesman
